Compared Physically.

PVERY now and then, in the sporting life, we are shocked by discovering that some pet theory of ours is based on a fallacy. We think that Bob Fitssimmons is the greatest amusal trainer outside of a circus, and the life of the sound a hold that just as the idea gains such a hold that we would be willing to back Freckled Bob against Senor Bachigaloupi or any other famous gentleman of the barred arene. Bob's Hon bites a hole in his les that you could drive a cart through. We are strong in the opinion that some champion can't be whipped, and just when we are getting ready to take down the largest bet we have ventured for a year of Sundays along comes an or a year or sundays along comes ag-entire stranger and sends our champ into a slumber too deep even for night-mares. 'Twas ever thus. We experience a nerve shock when some butter-in informs us that James J. Corbett never was a bank cashier before he entered the ring; that he was a small clerk and occasionally was even called upon to wield a broom in the early morning. It would be an awful thing if we were to learn that Bob Fitssimmons never was a horseshoer, but only worked the bellows in a blackmith when when he was a small hav amith shop when he was a small boy. It would jar us to be told that Hacken-schmidt was a professional phochla-player in his youth, not a weight lifter. But all these things pale into in-significance before the disclosure that Jeffries never was a boilermaker.

HIS upsets all the theories that the champion got his terrible hitting power by lying on his back and heading rivets. When the truth is published the boiler foundries all over the country will lose hundreds of prospective boxing champions, who are at industriously following Jeff's supposed example.

The truth of the matter is that Jeffries did when a youngster work for a while in a brass foundry. It was Lacy Co., of Los Angeles, that employed

Mr. Lacy, the head of the company, had a liking for sport. One day he told an athletic acquaintance that there was a youngster in the foundry who could whip any man in the world. athletic acquaintance that there "Why do you think so?" asked the

"Well," said Mr. Lack, "he is the strongest man I ever saw. Yesterday three of my men were trying to move a big casting. They couldn't budge it. Then along came this young fellow Jeffries, pushed them all away, and heaved it over himself. He's a won-der."

The acquaintance told Mr. Lacy that ability to lift weights was no sign of fighting ability. Shortly afterward young Jeffries tried his hand at competing in the ring and soon left the brass foundry for good. But he never was a boilermaker at all, at all.

Not long ago this D'Meza was considered a second-rater in Havana, and none of the big teams wanted him. He was so obscure that his name was hardly known to the fans. Munzo, the great Havana pitcher was king of the suddenly D'Meza appeared wit the Almendares. He pitched against Munoz and, to the amazement of all the followers of the game, beat out the popular favorite and won the championship for his team.

The Cubans claim that D'Meza's pitching is the most wonderful thing ever seen in the Antilles. He has what they call the 'rosin ball," and it is popularly supposed that he rubs rosin dust on the ball before the delivery, just as Chesbro uses saliva. The ball tumps up and down, travelling in a letter S eurve. It is almost impossible for the batter to touch it.

"HACK" A NATURAL BORN STRONG MAN

The "Russian Lion" One Mass of Soft. Pliable Muscles, Wherein He Differs from the Great Sandow, Who Has Acquired His Strength by Building.

There is no denying that to-day to become strong is a feverish passion. Iffting; and even at this, his own game, there are countiess systems open to would-be Sandows and Hackenschmidts. Hackenschmidt is the superior, having beaten most of Sandow's established after three, after six and after twelve months' training.

Now. George Hackenschmidt shows you natural-born strength in all its wonderful supremacy. He has kept himself in condition, it is true, by training, but he is not a manufactured strength, such as it is, is the result of arduous training from boyhood, for although it is not generally known, he started life as a luvenile member of an acrobatic troupe. Being taken in hand later in life by a professor of physical culture, he was built up, layer by layer, until he became, a machine-made "muscular chart" fit for exhibition.

Those muscles, however, of Sandow's which stand out so prominently and look so awe-inspiring under a calcium light are not muscles and move slowly like a badly oiled machine.

Hackenschmidt's are soft, pilable and of the highest grade.

It is doubtful if Sandow is expert at the last of his wonderful strength, to off-steadway at the coming match. Hackenschmidt's are soft, pilable and to the highest grade.

It is doubtful if Sandow is expert at the last of his strength and science. The invitation was accepted.

It is possible to make one's self a shapeller human being. One can carry one's self better and replace fat by muscle by the use of a hundred different exercises and dumbbells; but all this is different from strength—real, magnificent, natural strength—real, magnificent, natural strength—real strength—some of the forms genius strength—so one of the forms genius takes when it expresses itself physically.

Now, George Hackenschmidt shows you natural-born strength in all its

FOR OCEAN RACE Henry S. Redmond's Scotch yawl

Alisa was put overboard at Jacob's yard in City Island yesterday in preparation for the coming ocean race for the German Emperor's cup. She is the only yawi entered in the long ocean

Early in the morning the workmen began tearing down the scaffolding that has held her high and dry for two years, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon the famous Fife-designed 90-footer, snugly held in cradle, began sliding down the marine railway. When her great hull stood upon the fin keel unsupported at either end her strength and condition were convinc-ingly shown. The Alisa seems as stolld as ever. Her broad sides had been painted and polished until they shone under the sun, and her general appears under the sun, and her general appearance was so spick and span that she looked every inch like a new boat taking her maden plunge.

Robert Jacob mide all the preparations for putting her overboard, and just before she started for the water Capt. Lem Miller and twelve sallors who are to make up part of her crew in the ocean race clambered up on her dock. She started down the railway as even as clockwork. Not a single hitch of any sort marred her progress. She she along so smoothly that it seemed as if she could not get into the water quick enough after her long rest on shore. After she floated lines were passed to the dock and she was hauled alongside.

HERMAN BESTS YOUNG ERNE

PHILADELPHIA. April 25.— Kide Herman, of Chicago, bested Young Erne, of this city, in six fast rounds last night. It was Herman's aggress-iveness that earned for him the ver-dict, as Erne had him beaten in longrange work.
In the sixth round Herman was all over the local lad and had him holding for dear life. Erne had a little ing for dear life. Erne had a little the best of the early lighting, but he lost his speed and the decision in the latter rounds.

In the semi-windup Harry Decker had a shade on Kid Egan, of Washington. Decker was too big for the Kid, who fought a great up-hill battle.

The fights scheduled at the Frankford A. C. hast night were called off, owing to slim attendance.
